Colorimetric Detection of DNA based on the amplification of target ssDNA through the catalytic cleavage reaction of T2 nuclease on gold nanoparticles. In this work, we report a novel colorimetric method for sensitive and selective DNA detection based on the amplification of target ssDNA through the catalytic cleavage reaction of T2 nuclease on gold nanoparticles. The assay is based on the high target specificity of T2 nuclease that efficiently cleaves dsDNA and the catalytic activity of gold nanoparticles (Au NPs) that brings metal nanoparticles near the terminal amine groups of the dA-rich target ssDNA so that the biotinylated ssDNA can hybridize to the Au NPs. Then the target ssDNA is cleaved by T2 nuclease resulting in the decrease in particle size of Au NPs and release of Au NPs to the solution. The color of Au N
